FOR PARENTS

How to Use This Menu

Five steps

1. Fill in the rewards together with your child — let them suggest ideas, then you agree.
2. Give each reward a star value that matches its size.
3. When your child has enough stars, they tick “Redeemed” and claim the reward.
4. Retire old rewards, add new ones, and adjust star values as your child grows.
5. Keep the goal in view: building effort, consistency and good character for the sake of Allah.

Keep rewards wholesome

- Prefer time together over things: baking, a walk, a picnic, reading together.
- Choose gifts that build: books, art and craft supplies, sports kit, a plant to look after.
- Avoid rewards built around music, celebrations not from Islam, or images of living beings.
- Food treats are fine in moderation — say Bismillah and enjoy them together.
- Never use salah or Qur’an as a punishment; keep worship linked to love and reward.
- Praise the effort and the intention, not only the result.

GIFTS BRING LOVE

تَهَادَوْا تَحَابُّوا

“Give gifts to one another and you will love one another.” Al-Adab al-Mufrad 594 · hasan (al-Albani)

SMALL AND CONSTANT

أَحَبُّ الْأَعْمَالِ إِلَى اللَّهِ تَعَالَى أَدْوَمُهَا وَإِنْ قَلَّ

“The deeds most beloved to Allah are the most constant, even if they are small.” Muslim 783

Remember: Stars and treats are only a help along the way. Teach your child that the true reward is with Allah, who never lets a good deed go to waste.
